Foreword

Herein contains my summary of the sermons for 2022. These sermons notes are mostly typed out during the sermon as the pastor preaches. Sometimes I will add in some of my own clarifications/notes/thoughts to the points given by the pastors, hence one can safely assume that any theological errors found herein are to be attributed to me, not the pastors.

23rd January 2022: A Father's invitation to wisdom

Text: Proverbs 1

[1] The proverbs of Solomon, son of David, king of Israel:

[2] To know wisdom and instruction, to understand words of insight, [3] to receive instruction in wise dealing, in righteousness, justice, and equity; [4] to give prudence to the simple, knowledge and discretion to the youth— [5] Let the wise hear and increase in learning, and the one who understands obtain guidance, [6] to understand a proverb and a saying, the words of the wise and their riddles.

[7] The fear of the LORD is the beginning of knowledge; fools despise wisdom and instruction.

[8] Hear, my son, your father's instruction, and forsake not your mother's teaching, [9] for they are a graceful garland for your head and pendants for your neck. [10] My son, if sinners entice you, do not consent. [11] If they say, "Come with us, let us lie in wait for blood; let us ambush the innocent without reason; [12] like Sheol let us swallow them alive, and whole, like those who go down to the pit; [13] we shall find all precious goods, we shall fill our houses with plunder; [14] throw in your lot among us; we will all have one purse"— [15] my son, do not walk in the way with them; hold back your foot from their paths, [16] for their feet run to evil, and they make haste to shed blood. [17] For in vain is a net spread in the sight of any bird, [18] but these men lie in wait for their own blood; they set an ambush for their own lives. [19] Such are the ways of everyone who is greedy for unjust gain; it takes away the life of its possessors.

[20] Wisdom cries aloud in the street, in the markets she raises her voice; [21] at the head of the noisy streets she cries out; at the entrance of the city gates she speaks: [22] "How long, O simple ones, will you love being simple? How long will scoffers delight in their scoffing and fools hate knowledge? [23] If you turn at my reproof, behold, I will pour out my spirit to you; I will make my words known to you. [24] Because I have called and you refused to listen, have stretched out my hand and no one has heeded, [25] because you have ignored all my counsel and would have none of my reproof, [26] I also will laugh at your calamity; I will mock when terror strikes you, [27] when terror strikes you like a storm and your calamity comes like a whirlwind, when distress and anguish come upon you. [28] Then they will call upon me, but I will not answer; they will seek me diligently but will not find me. [29] Because they hated knowledge and did not choose the fear of the LORD, [30] would have none of my counsel and despised all my reproof, [31] therefore they shall eat the fruit of their way, and have their fill of their own devices. [32] For the simple are killed by their turning away, and the complacency of fools destroys them; [33] but whoever listens to me will dwell secure and will be at ease, without dread of disaster."

Notes

- Authorship of Proverbs: Mainly Solomon (see chapter 1:1, chapter 10:1, chapter 25:1) but also others like Agur, Lemuel, "the wise", etc. Though Solomon's wisdom is greater than all of the others' wisdom (1 Kings 4:29-34).
- Apparently, Solomon was also a man of science; his study of nature helped him to see wisdom in the created order, like when he provides an analogy to the ant to explain the value of hard work and diligence. As will be seen in the later sermons, God's wisdom is baked into the whole created order (Proverbs 8, Proverbs 3) and hence one can get wisdom by studying the created order.

- That being said, books of Wisdom like Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, Job are revealing divine truths about the world, more than just information about the world.
- Proverbs teaches divine truth, teaching God's people what godly living in day to day life looks like. Though on this note, Proverbs teaches us general principles instead of going into specifics; for example, in Proverbs 13 when the child and the rod are mentioned, the text does not tell us how many times we should use the rod, how much force to use with the rod, etc.
- Again, we must emphasize that that wisdom is from God above (2 Chronicles 1:8-10), though it is available to all by God's common grace.
- Proverbs invites us to reflect upon God's truths rather than to promise us immediate rewards for our choices.
- Wisdom literature in its entirety (Job and Ecclesiastes also) teach God's people the entire complexity of life.
  - Proverbs gives us general principles for us to ponder and consider as we think about living righteously.
  - Job and Ecclesiastes handle the edge cases (i.e, exceptions to the general principles in Proverbs) that now occur because of sin. E.g, Proverbs say that generally the wicked will suffer for their wickedness, but Job and Ecclesiastes show the exceptions to the above general rule.
- Wisdom is more about knowledge, it is also about skillfulness (Exodus 31:1-3). More than being knowledgeable, being wise is to be skillful in applying God's truth in our life.
- True wisdom is inseparable from righteousness. Wisdom teaches us how to do righteousness, and teaches us how to see beneath the surface to make sound judgements.
  - The Law teaches us what is right and wrong, but the emphasis of the Law is not on the "how".
  - Wisdom emphasises that right living leads to life, wrong living leads to death (Proverbs 1:29-32), then goes on to give us general principles on what right living looks like.
- "Wisdom cries out in the street" God's wisdom is available to all, not hidden. It is just whether people want to hear or not.
- Wisdom is received on bended knees (Proverbs 1:7)
  - To fear God is to reverence God and to humbly submit to God's power and moral authority over all things.
  - Fools disregard God and ignore God's moral authority, e.g Adam and Eve and the Fall.
  - God's moral authority is baked into God's creation, hence people who go against God's moral authority go against God's created order and hence generally hurt themselves. E.g, addiction to drugs, addiction to pornography, sex outside of marriage etc all are scientifically proven to cause harm to a person.
    - * Though we must emphasize again that the devastating effect of going against God's wisdom in the created order is obscured because of sin, i.e sin throws the balance of the creation abit off (e.g thorns and thistles), and sin darkens our mind such that we don't really see the devastating, natural consequences of sin until it is too late.

- Wisdom from God is best exemplified in Jesus (1 Corinthians 1:30). Fear of God will lead us to be transformed through Jesus. Not our own wisdom that transforms us, but Jesus makes us wise.
- Wisdom is learnt not alone, but in the context of community and discipleship

30th January 2022: Living wisely before God

Text: Proverbs 3:1-12

[1] My son, do not forget my teaching, but let your heart keep my commandments, [2] for length of days and years of life and peace they will add to you.

[3] Let not steadfast love and faithfulness forsake you; bind them around your neck; write them on the tablet of your heart. [4] So you will find favor and good success in the sight of God and man.

[5] Trust in the LORD with all your heart, and do not lean on your own understanding. [6] In all your ways acknowledge him, and he will make straight your paths. [7] Be not wise in your own eyes; fear the LORD, and turn away from evil. [8] It will be healing to your flesh and refreshment to your bones.

[9] Honor the LORD with your wealth and with the firstfruits of all your produce; [10] then your barns will be filled with plenty, and your vats will be bursting with wine.

[11] My son, do not despise the LORD's discipline or be weary of his reproof, [12] for the LORD reproves him whom he loves, as a father the son in whom he delights.

Notes

- Story of the lazy grasshopper and the hardworking ant: idleness leads to hunger. This was a very famous fable in ancient Greece to teach diligence. In Proverbs, there is a similar story in Proverbs 6:6-8.
- Every culture has a wisdom tradition. This makes sense, because wisdom helps us to live a good life.
- Peace in verse 1 is "shalom" in Hebrew, i.e there is a connotation of wholeness and abundant welfare.
- God makes wisdom available to all, God created the earth by wisdom (Proverbs 3:19-20). I.e, God's wisdom is baked into His creation. The created world reflects God's wisdom, and hence it makes sense that we can learn wisdom by looking at God's created order (e.g by looking at the ant). This is regardless of whether one believes in God or not. This is nothing but the generosity of God, who freely gives his creatures common grace.
- However, the wisdom as described above is incomplete. I would add that because of sin, the wisdom as described above is fallen; now we have wicked people prospering for example. Sin has affected God's creation such that the wisdom baked into God's creation is abit disrupted, and also sin has affected us such that we are partially blind to all the wisdom in God's creation too. Hence, all human wisdom must be completed and reframed by God's revelation. To truly live the good life, we are to be like God, and we are to submit to God.
  - To be like God, we are to acquire the character of God. From v3-4, we must possess steadfast love and faithfulness, in order to find success before the eyes of God and Man. But steadfast love and faithfulness are qualities of God (Exodus 34:6). This makes sense, because we are made in the image of God, and hence reflecting God's character is what we are supposed to do anyway. Hence just as how God shows steadfast love and faithfulness to us, we should show steadfast love and faithfulness to others. Of course, showing steadfast love and faithfulness to others might lead to us sacrificing something on our end. However, living the good life is not about maximising our self pleasure, but it is about the collective shalom of all, which is God's original plan for humanity anyway.

- To submit our lives to God, we need to submit our thinking, our possessions, and our negative life experiences.
  - * To submit our thinking, we must first note that we are finite creatures with a finite understanding. The worst thing for us is to be wise in our own eyes, because if that is the case, we can't grow intellectually. E.g Proverbs 26:12. Now, if we note that God is infinitely wise than us, then we ought not to be wise in our own sight, we must trust that God's commandments are far wiser than our own understanding of the world. As Paul said, God's "foolishness" is infinitely wiser than human wisdom. An example is the flawed human "wisdom" of "can do whatever, just don't get caught". But God's wisdom is Romans 13, submitting to lawful authority. We are to "trust in the LORD with all your heart, and do not lean on your own understanding..."
  - * To submit our possessions, we see that in verses 9 and 10 of our text. This is not prosperity gospel, it is not about how when we give more, we will receive more. This wisdom has the context of Israel's old covenant, where giving is part of the Law, and obeying the Law is about love for God and faithfulness for God. And as per the OT promises, when Israel is faithful to God, God will bless Israel with material possessions in this world. For us in the NT, even though the old sacrificial system is not for us, this principle is for us too, just that it is transformed; see Luke 12:33. We should not expect God to bless us with material wealth when we submit our possessions to God, because God gives us things far better than material wealth; God gives us treasure in heaven.
  - * To submit our negative life experiences to God, we first look at Proverbs 13:24 too. Just like how parents discipline their children, God disciplines us too. However, not all suffering we experience is God's discipline/punishment of us. See Ecclesiastes 8:14 and Job. Some of the suffering we experience is a result/consequence of sin. It is wiser to regard suffering not necessarily as God's punishment for us (unless God has clearly revealed this to us), but as something that will draw us to God. Suffering itself is not good, but God can bring good out of our suffering when we bring it to God. This is what it means to submit our negative life experiences (our suffering) to God. In fact, suffering sometimes can lead to greater holiness and deeper communion with God, which is part of living the good life, and hence paradoxically, we might find greater shalom with God in our suffering.
- The ultimate portrait of wisdom for us is Jesus Christ. Jesus Christ was completely like God, and fully submitted Himself to God. What Jesus did seemed foolish by worldly standards, but it is infinitely wise by God's standard, and hence God has highly exalted Jesus Christ. And now we can have the mind of Christ through the Holy Spirit. Let us seek this, and hence get the ultimate shalom.

6th February 2022: A disciple's heart

Text: Proverbs 4:20-27

[20] My son, be attentive to my words; incline your ear to my sayings. [21] Let them not escape from your sight; keep them within your heart. [22] For they are life to those who find them, and healing to all their flesh. [23] Keep your heart with all vigilance, for from it flow the springs of life. [24] Put away from you crooked speech, and put devious talk far from you. [25] Let your eyes look directly forward, and your gaze be straight before you. [26] Ponder the path of your feet; then all your ways will be sure. [27] Do not swerve to the right or to the left; turn your foot away from evil.

Notes

- The key point of today's text is verse 23. For the ancient Israelites, faith is not separated from knowledge and not separated from one's experience of the world. Two points today: guarding the heart, and acting in wisdom. Btw, the word "heart" here refers not to the physical heart, but to the entire inner life of the person.
- Wisdom starts with inclining our ears to our parent's saying. That's how we learnt things like "don't touch the hot stove" etc.
- Guarding our hearts means to watch our inner man with all vigilance. Whatever happens to the heart will affect everything a person does. I.e, if the heart is corrupt, then the affections, motives, pursuits of a person will be corrupt. The heart is the core of the person.
- As Augustine said: "You have made us for yourself, O Lord, and our heart is restless until it rests in you". The restlessness is because of sin; sin causes us to try to fill our heart with worldly things, which will only make us restless, but as we all know only God can fill our heart.
- The heart is what God transforms in the New Covenant, e.g Jeremiah 31:33. And once the heart is transformed, we will have abundant life in the sense of John 10:10b. Also, from John 7:37-38, we see that believing in Jesus is the way to have a transformed heart.
- We guard our hearts practically by Psalm 119:11. Guarding our hearts keeps us from sinning, and helps us to live the abundant life that God has for us. The more we hear God's word, the more we will recognise God's voice.
- In life we watch many worldly things carefully, like our weight, our children's grades, sales, etc. But the text today says, above all else, guard your hearts.
- If we are parents/teachers, we help our kids guard their hearts through sound instruction in the fear of God.
- If we give our hearts to Jesus, Jesus must control everything, not just certain portions of our lives. The heart is the core of the person, and if we truly give our heart to Jesus, the entire life will be transformed, not just selected portions.
- Walking in wisdom: first of all, we note that our actions follow our beliefs. Our behavior is a good indication of what is in our heart. Actions here refer to what we say (v24), what we see (v25), and how we walk (v26).
  - By the way, actions here include what we say (v24). As per what Jesus says, what comes from the mouth first comes from the heart. To walk wisely, we must be careful with what we say with our mouths; that is a practical application of guarding our hearts.

- Our actions here also include what we see (v25). So we should keep our eyes on heavenly things, and look at all things in the world through the lens of God's word. Keeping our eyes on heavenly things mean to keep heavenly things as our primary motivation, e.g Paul and running the race, keeping his eyes on the prize.
- Our actions here also include what we do with our feet (v26). There are two paths we can choose to walk; the straight and the narrow path, or the wide path that leads to destruction. As another application of guarding our hearts, we must daily constantly walk on the straight and narrow, and turn away from the wide path that leads to destruction.
- Our perfect role model for all of the above is our Lord Jesus Christ, who perfectly obeyed the voice of His Father and who perfectly did the will of His Father. Because He is the perfect Son, He brings many sons and daughters into glory through the cross. With Christ's help, it is possible for us to guard our hearts, through the Holy Spirit that Jesus sends us to help us walk in His example.
- In conclusion, let us guard our hearts and walk in wisdom (which is the result/expression of us guarding our hearts), and we can walk in wisdom by watching the things we say, the things we see, and the things we choose to do (our feet).

13th February 2022: Do you want to be blessed?

Text: Jeremiah 17:5-10

[5] Thus says the LORD: "Cursed is the man who trusts in man and makes flesh his strength, whose heart turns away from the LORD. [6] He is like a shrub in the desert, and shall not see any good come. He shall dwell in the parched places of the wilderness, in an uninhabited salt land.

[7] "Blessed is the man who trusts in the LORD, whose trust is the LORD. [8] He is like a tree planted by water, that sends out its roots by the stream, and does not fear when heat comes, for its leaves remain green, and is not anxious in the year of drought, for it does not cease to bear fruit."

[9] The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately sick; who can understand it?

[10] "I the LORD search the heart and test the mind, to give every man according to his ways, according to the fruit of his deeds."

Notes

- The bible has a different take on what it means to be blessed, as compared to the secular idea of blessings being in the form of health and wealth. Of course God can bless us with such health and wealth, but having health and wealth is not a necessary condition for one consider himself blessed by God (see Luke 6:17-26). Let's understand why the poor etc can consider himself blessed.
- In the Jeremiah text, there are two groups; those who trust in man vs those who trust in God. Those who trusted in man would be those, in Jeremiah's time, would be those who trust in military might, in false gods and false prophets. Those who trusted in God, in Jeremiah's time, would be those who rely on God for deliverance. There are also two analogies corresponding to these two groups: shrub in the desert vs the tree planted by the stream.
  - Those who trust in man are like the shrub who don't bear any fruit.
  - Those who trust in God are like the tree which always bears fruit, whose leaves are always green.

Both the shrub and the tree might both experience drought, but because the roots of the shrub are not deep, the shrub will wither. But for the tree, since the roots are deep, it can still bear fruit in times of drought.

- I.e, those who trust in man are cursed, and those who trust in God are blessed. What is depicted here in Jeremiah is a throwback to the Mosaic Law, in Deuteronomy 28. There will be blessings for obedience and curses for disobedience. Faith and obedience go hand in hand; those who trust and have faith in God will obey God naturally. When we trust God, we will obey. And when we obey, we will be blessed. Hence we can say that those who trust in God will be blessed.
- In Jeremiah's time, Judah was a nation that didn't trust in God, hence they experienced the curses of the Law, experiencing things like famine etc and even eventually exile. But for those in Judah that were going through the same difficult times, they are still blessed as long as their trust is in the LORD.
- Hence in Luke, even in adverse circumstances (e.g poverty), we can still be blessed when we obey. Blessing does not necessarily remove suffering; in the Jeremiah text, we see that even the tree experiences drought (Jeremiah 17:8). Hence we can say that the poor who trust in God are still blessed.

- What are some of these blessings? They are:
  - Peace that transcends all understanding.
  - Communion and friendship with God.
  - Treasures in heaven.
- So how is all of these relevant for us? The starting point of a blessed life is to put our trust in God for our salvation. We must trust in Jesus' finished work on the cross rather than in our own works; our hearts are deceitful above all things, and hence our own works are rubbish. Jesus has come to seek and save the lost, only Jesus can save us, because only He has died on the cross for our sins. For His suffering on our behalf, our sins are cleansed, but if and only if we put our trust in Jesus. If we reject Jesus and put our trust in ourselves (i.e in man) instead, we are cursed. The "good works" that we do will never be enough before a holy and just God. Apart from Jesus, we are under the wrath of God for our sins; and this will manifest itself especially on judgement day. Hence, the starting point of a blessed life is to trust in Jesus' completed work for our salvation.
- We can also put our trust in man when we trust in the physical blessings that God give us rather than recognising that God is behind all of those blessings. When those physical blessings distract us from God, then those physical blessings will lead us to be cursed. E.g, some parents' lives revolve around their children so much so that they have no time to spend with God, no time to participate in church life, etc. We should work hard and study hard and take care of our kids etc, this is our testimony before the world. But we should not let these things distract us from God, because if not we will be like the shrub in the desert. Hence let us repent and seek God and His kingdom first.
- When we are going through difficult times, are we turning our hearts away from God in anger and disappointment or do we cling on to God with confidence and hope? If we turn away from the source of blessings (i.e God), how can we be blessed? There are two examples which Pastor Kien Seng talked about:
  - Example 1: Very sian because of physical sickness, don't even want to come to church.
  - Example 2: Physical sickness has led to greater trust and dependence in God.

Here we see two people in the same circumstance but one is evidently more blessed than the other, because he is closer to God. The latter person is what it means to be blessed in God's eyes.

- So do you want to be blessed? If you do,
  - Believe in Jesus, cultivate your relationship with Jesus. Cling on to Him, put your trust in Him. Put our trust in who God is and what He has done for us, especially in the finished work of the cross. Putting our trust in God also means putting our trust in His Word, because His Word reveals who He is and what He has done. We also put our trust in God's promises. And when we trust in God's promises and His Word, we are like the wise man who builds his house on the rock.

20th February 2022: Turning from anger

Text: Proverbs 15:1,18;16:32;27:3,4

[1] A soft answer turns away wrath, but a harsh word stirs up anger. [18] A hot-tempered man stirs up strife, but he who is slow to anger quiets contention.

[32] Whoever is slow to anger is better than the mighty, and he who rules his spirit than he who takes a city.

[3] A stone is heavy, and sand is weighty, but a fool's provocation is heavier than both.

[4] Wrath is cruel, anger is overwhelming, but who can stand before jealousy?

Notes

- Anger is a common emotion; even animals can get angry. It is possible to get angry without sinning; see Ephesians (Be angry and do not sin). Anger is not sin in and of itself, but our response to our anger could be sin.
- Anger is part of our body's fight or flight response, more specifically our fight response; anger can help us to protect ourselves/others, stand up against injustices of the world.
- To see that anger can be non-sinful, consider that God can be angry; however, God's anger is wholly without sin. God is also not fundamentally angry, he is fundamentally righteous; his anger is directed at the sinfulness of Man.
- But anger can of course be sinful, when it controls us and makes us mean, full of hatred and bitterness. One simple example is road rage.
- For Man, anger is usually an emotional response to a threat against our ego. Human experience makes this abundantly clear.
- To help manage our anger, there are 3 main points:
  - First point: restraint, not react. Instinctively, when we hear something we don't like, sometimes we just react based on the emotions we are feeling. These feelings are often based on our first impressions of the things we have heard, and contain a lot of our biases. Most of the time, people are triggered when:
    - * They feel threatened.
    - * They feel frustrated or powerless, hence angry at ourselves. Or angry at the situation.
    - * They feel invalidated or unfairly treated.
    - * They or their possessions are not respected.

For us personally, it is helpful to find out what are our triggers. However, all of the above is not an excuse for sin; just because triggers exist doesn't mean we have to be triggered. Self-control is a Christian virtue, a fruit of the Spirit (Galatians 5:22-23). Practically, we can restrain when we deliberately interrupt our 'reactive' response, by walking away, slowly counting to 5, taking a break from the situation, etc. If we must respond, we are to give a 'soft answer'. If we can't give a 'soft answer', it is better to keep quiet. If we can't give a 'soft answer' and shout back because of our anger, then the other person will get angry also, and then there'll be a relationship breakdown. The above might seem hard to do, but remember that Jesus faced the biggest injustice in the world, yet he was like a lamb led to the slaughter; he opened not his mouth.

- Second point: re-evaluate, not relish. When we re-evaluate something, we do it more objectively as compared to our instinctive response, and we widen the possible explanations or interpretations of the actions or what was said. When we relish, we take delight in going through the situation over and over again to stir up our emotions. We become more angry and our burden becomes heavier. We should also re-evaluate the consequences of our possible angry actions, especially in light of James 1:19-20. We must remember that our human anger does not produce the righteousness of God. One such consequence is that our unrestrained anger is a poor testimony to our Christian faith.
- Third point: release, not retain. Keeping our anger within us is described as a burden, as in Proverbs 27:3-4. A stone is a heavy thing, and as for sand, a lot of it is a heavy thing. Sand is a particularly good analogy; if everytime we retain our anger we store up a grain of sand, then in half a lifetime, all that sand will accumulate to be something super heavy. And also, as per the proverbs verse, one possible thing that stirs up our anger is jealousy. To release our anger to God, we should:
  - * Be truthful with God about your feelings. Lament them to God, as per in the Psalms.
  - * Be ready to forgive those who said those things that made us angry. Just as God forgiven us, we should also forgive.
  - * Ask God to turn our problems into solutions.
  - * To combat jealousy, we thank God that we are made differently and given different gifts. We affirm the good in our lives and recognise the source of goodness which is from God.
- Our angry, sinful response is merely a symptom of a greater problem, which is sin. The Bible is not just an anger management manual; when Jesus died on the cross for our sins, He removed the root of our human anger, which is sin. The ultimate remedy for anger is to kill the sin in our lives, through the ministry of the Holy Spirit and of the Word. We are to emulate Jesus' example, as per Philippians 2:3-11, and when we do, anger will vanish. When we are slighted, we must remember that we forgive as God forgiven us.

27th February 2022: Fleeing from sexual immorality

Text: Proverbs 5:1-23

[1] My son, be attentive to my wisdom; incline your ear to my understanding, [2] that you may keep discretion, and your lips may guard knowledge. [3] For the lips of a forbidden woman drip honey, and her speech is smoother than oil, [4] but in the end she is bitter as wormwood, sharp as a two-edged sword. [5] Her feet go down to death; her steps follow the path to Sheol; [6] she does not ponder the path of life; her ways wander, and she does not know it.

[7] And now, O sons, listen to me, and do not depart from the words of my mouth. [8] Keep your way far from her, and do not go near the door of her house, [9] lest you give your honor to others and your years to the merciless, [10] lest strangers take their fill of your strength, and your labors go to the house of a foreigner, [11] and at the end of your life you groan, when your flesh and body are consumed, [12] and you say, "How I hated discipline, and my heart despised reproof! [13] I did not listen to the voice of my teachers or incline my ear to my instructors. [14] I am at the brink of utter ruin in the assembled congregation."

[15] Drink water from your own cistern, flowing water from your own well. [16] Should your springs be scattered abroad, streams of water in the streets? [17] Let them be for yourself alone, and not for strangers with you. [18] Let your fountain be blessed, and rejoice in the wife of your youth, [19] a lovely deer, a graceful doe. Let her breasts fill you at all times with delight; be intoxicated always in her love. [20] Why should you be intoxicated, my son, with a forbidden woman and embrace the bosom of an adulteress? [21] For a man's ways are before the eyes of the LORD, and he ponders all his paths. [22] The iniquities of the wicked ensnare him, and he is held fast in the cords of his sin. [23] He dies for lack of discipline, and because of his great folly he is led astray.

Notes

- Sex is a very precious and powerful gift given to us by God. It is so powerful and precious that if sex is abused, it will have dire consequences. Scripture doesn't pull any punches in this topic, because the stakes are high. This is an issue that affects everyone, married/unmarried, men/women. While proverbs 5 is addressed literally to men, we can easily apply it to women. The reason why it is addressed to men is cultural and will not be explored here.
- Three main points:
  - Attraction: the power of attraction and how it works.
  - Attrition: the wear and tear, the pain and comes our way when we fall into sexual immorality.
  - Attention: how are we to discipline our attention to avoid sexual immorality.
- Attraction: There is hardly a Christian person that wakes up thinking "today I want to fall into sexual immorality". But Christians still fall nonetheless because we are led along by sin, i.e we are attracted to sin. Two avenues by which we are attracted is via the ear and the eye; see proverbs 5:3. And also, by the scent, or by the touch. Different people are more susceptible to different things. So we must know what our weakness is, so we can take appropriate measures to flee. Specifically for the ear and the eye, we have pornography; there are hardly any silent pornographic films for example, they use the two-pronged approach. This is an issue that is especially difficult in the Internet age. There are many strategies that we can take to counter this temptation; though those strategies can be inconvenient, we must do it, because if we don't, we will be led along.

- Attrition: What if we are led along? If we are, we can look at Proverbs 5:4-14. I.e, a large proportion of Proverbs 5 describes the great and dire consequences of being led along by sexual sin, so that when we enter into temptation, we might consider the consequences and get out of temptation. E.g, Proverbs 5:4-5. There is bitterness, loss of honor, lost of years (e.g when your whole life with your spouse come crashing down because of infidelity). Being attracted to sin is like borrowing from a loan shark; if we borrow, we might need to pay it back with a lot of interest. E.g for one moment of pleasure with an adulteress, we might need to spend many, many years rebuilding family relationships. The price of sexual immorality is real and hefty.

The long description of attrition here also tells us that God wants our life to flourish, and that our life flourishes only when we walk according to the framework of God's Law, which is the divine design for a flourishing human life. We need to daily consider the stakes, to help us flee from sexual immorality.

- Attention: So what are we to do with this frightening monster? There are external things we can do, but there are also internal things (see Proverbs 5:7) we can do, which we shall classify as disciplining our attention. What we give our attention to can be trained; we must be intentional about what we think about, what we look at, to know when to stay and dwell, to know when to flee like Joseph in Potiphar's house. One thing we can dwell in is to our allegiance to our spouse and our family, see Proverbs 5:15-20. We must daily put our attention there, so that when temptation comes, we will know that we must flee. Another idea we can dwell in is to discipline our affection; see verse 18. We must always strive to dwell on and develop our affection for our spouse. If we think that our relationship is getting 'stale', we must then take time to put our attention to appreciate the depths of beauty in our spouse. People will age, but the inner beauty is permanent (charm is deceitful, beauty is vain, but the fear of the Lord...). In fact, the word "intoxicated" here for the wife is the same as "leading astray" used for the adulteress above. Thus, the author of Proverbs is contrasting the two types of "leading astray" here.
- In conclusion, remember the three points here; the attraction of sexual sin, the attrition caused by sexual sin, and to discipline our attention. Especially in the NT context, remember that our bodies are temples of the Holy Spirit (1 Corinthians 6:19-20). Sexual sin can be forgiven by your spouse, but the real life consequences, the hurt and the pain, are real. Sexual sin can be forgiven but not forgotten. So don't fall into it, consider the consequences, and discipline your attention. And for the unmarried, we must still discipline our attention, so that we don't get led astray into destruction. And when we do so, we learn to discern what is important in a life partner.

6th March 2022: Find us faithful

Text:

[12] On the following day, when they came from Bethany, he was hungry. [13] And seeing in the distance a fig tree in leaf, he went to see if he could find anything on it. When he came to it, he found nothing but leaves, for it was not the season for figs. [14] And he said to it, "May no one ever eat fruit from you again." And his disciples heard it.

[15] And they came to Jerusalem. And he entered the temple and began to drive out those who sold and those who bought in the temple, and he overturned the tables of the money-changers and the seats of those who sold pigeons. [16] And he would not allow anyone to carry anything through the temple. [17] And he was teaching them and saying to them, "Is it not written, "My house shall be called a house of prayer for all the nations"? But you have made it a den of robbers." [18] And the chief priests and the scribes heard it and were seeking a way to destroy him, for they feared him, because all the crowd was astonished at his teaching. [19] And when evening came they went out of the city.

[20] As they passed by in the morning, they saw the fig tree withered away to its roots. [21] And Peter remembered and said to him, "Rabbi, look! The fig tree that you cursed has withered." [22] And Jesus answered them, "Have faith in God. [23] Truly, I say to you, whoever says to this mountain, "Be taken up and thrown into the sea," and does not doubt in his heart, but believes that what he says will come to pass, it will be done for him. [24] Therefore I tell you, whatever you ask in prayer, believe that you have received it, and it will be yours. [25] And whenever you stand praying, forgive, if you have anything against anyone, so that your Father also who is in heaven may forgive you your trespasses."

Notes

- This cursing of the fig tree was in the week before Passover. During this time, it wasn't the fig season yet; thus obviously there wouldn't have been any figs on the fig tree. Then why did Jesus curse the fig tree for not producing food? The reason was to create a teaching opportunity with the disciples.
- People might think that it wasn't fair for Jesus to curse the tree. Yet it was also unfair for the sinless Son of Man to die on the cross. So yea lol. What was the lesson that Jesus wanted to teach? Note that the cleansing of the temple is in between the cursing and the withering of the fig tree. So the fig tree was being compared to the temple; though it looks busy, there is no fruit. And hence we find Jesus foretelling the destruction of the temple in chapter 13; the withering of the fig tree was an analogy of the temple.
- By the way, interesting question; if buying and selling things made the temple unclean, then do similar things that happen in church make the church unclean? Answer is, it depends; see the below:
- Jesus overturned the market to create a teaching opportunity, see verse 17. Two verses were quoted here, Isaiah 56:7 for the house of prayer, Jeremiah 7:11 for the den of robbers. Some context: only one type of currency was accepted for temple tax, hence a genuine need for money changing. Also, only unblemished animals were allowed as sacrifices, hence people would prefer to buy animals in the city themselves. In King Herod's time, he also expanded the temple, to create an outer court for the Gentiles. This wasn't part of God's original temple plan, but perhaps this was God's way of allowing the Gentiles to pray in the temple. The religious leaders in those days allowed the outer court to be used for trading, buying and selling. During the time of passover, there would be a lot of activity in the outer court, and hence the Gentiles wouldn't have been able to pray because of the lack of space. Hence, the Isaiah verse tells us what the temple should have been, but the Jeremiah verse tells us what the temple is really used for because of sin. The religious leaders neglected the Isaiah verse w.r.t Gentiles, and focused on the business side of things to line their own pockets.

- So according to Isaiah 56:7, the church should be a house to make disciples of all nations. Like the story of the fig tree, when we focus on making the church attractive instead of having actual discipleship, then we'll end up like the fig tree. Though we must stress; it is ok to want to beautify the church, and to have other activities in church etc. But all of those things must serve to build up the church in a real spiritual manner; if they don't and instead distract us from doing God's work, then we should scrap them instead of focusing on them at the expense of actual discipleship, lest we end up like a den of robbers. Real example: coffee in cosy corner is not a bad thing, but if considerable time is spent on deciding things like the type of coffee instead of the actual discipleship, then we have turned the house of God into a den of robbers.
- Another way that the church can be turned into a den of robbers is the prosperity gospel. Just because scripture is quoted, doesn't mean that it is used correctly; even the devil knows how to use the scripture (c.f temptation of Jesus in the wilderness). A correct use of scripture by the church leaders should lead to actual transformation of the heart, a true turning away from sin and to God. A wrong use of scripture by the church leaders leads to people doing things like asking people to give money to a hedge fund (with the details known only to a privileged few), asking people to buy books written by the senior pastor to make the book a bestseller, etc.
- Btw, this text can also be used to make statements about how faith in God can do miracles, c.f verse 22. This is how some pastors use this text. This use of the text would lead them to say stuff like "if you ask, you will receive; but if you don't receive, means you have no faith". But that's probably not the proper use of this text; we must always read this fig tree episode with the temple in mind (especially w.r.t the temple being mentioned again in chapter 13). Here, Jesus is contrasting faith in God and faith in the temple. Jesus was telling their disciples not to put their faith in the temple, but continue to have faith in God even when the temple is destroyed. This way, their continued faith in God would help them to overcome challenges to spread the gospel (even moving mountains), knowing that anything that they ask for the kingdom's sake will be given to them. So for us today, we must have faith in God, not in our church/our leaders/our parachurch organisation etc. Nothing wrong with liking our church, but it is problematic when our leaders are dodgy, and then if our faith is ultimately in our leaders, we will be wholly disillusioned and might leave our faith.

13th March 2022: At the Heart of God's Law

Text: Mark 12:23-34

[28] And one of the scribes came up and heard them disputing with one another, and seeing that he answered them well, asked him, "Which commandment is the most important of all?" [29] Jesus answered, "The most important is, 'Hear, O Israel: The Lord our God, the Lord is one. [30] And you shall love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your mind and with all your strength.' [31] The second is this: 'You shall love your neighbor as yourself.' There is no other commandment greater than these." [32] And the scribe said to him, "You are right, Teacher. You have truly said that he is one, and there is no other besides him. [33] And to love him with all the heart and with all the understanding and with all the strength, and to love one's neighbor as oneself, is much more than all whole burnt offerings and sacrifices." [34] And when Jesus saw that he answered wisely, he said to him, "You are not far from the kingdom of God." And after that no one dared to ask him any more questions.

Notes

- In Jesus' time, many religious leaders confronted Jesus with questions. But they weren't interested in finding out the truth; they were hoping to use these questions to trap Jesus so that Jesus would lose his credibility. But not the scribe in this passage; this scribe was said to be not far from the kingdom of God. The scribe had a genuine question, which was to find out what the heart of godly living was. And in this passage, Jesus answered the scribe directly.
- Instead of quoting a particular law, Jesus quoted the Shema (Deuteronomy 6). There is only one God, and we are to worship God single-mindedly. God graciously revealed Himself to Abraham and His descendants, and as a response to God's loving self revelation, Israel was supposed to pledge their allegiance to God. The LORD God allows Israel (and us) to know about Himself; His gracious self revelation provides us with true knowledge about Him and His nature. God is one, this means that God is unique, and that there is only one God. And hence we are to worship God alone.
- God's law's are meant to reveal His nature. When God gave Israel His law, He has already rescued them out of Egypt. It is not that Israel has to earn God's love by following His law; God already loved Israel when He gave them the Law, and the purpose of the Law giving was to teach Israel how to maintain a relationship with Him, especially since Israel was amongst the pagan nations.
- To love God is more than a fuzzy feeling towards God; love for God is doing actions demonstrated in faithfulness. If we read on in Deuteronomy 6, there are some actions that God suggests would be an expression of loving Him with all our heart, soul, mind and strength. These actions include passing down God's truth to the next generation (Deuteronomy 6:6-9). These actions also include giving thanks for our food, because "when we eat and are full, then take care lest you forget the LORD..."
- Running towards other idols will destroy us; God is the only source of life, and when we turn towards other idols and away from God, we are turning away from life and turning unto death.
- Apart from loving God, the next greatest commandment was loving our neighbour. What Jesus did that unique amongst the rabbis of His time; in the past, other rabbis also summarised the Law as loving our neighbour, but what Jesus did was to combine loving God and loving our neighbour. We cannot truly love God unless we love our neighbour, and we cannot truly love our neighbour unless we love God. For example, when we look at portions like Leviticus 19:10,18 we realise that we love our neighbour because “I am the LORD your God”.

- The scribe understood what Jesus said (see Mark 12:34). Instead of merely a confession of faith, God calls also for a demonstration of love towards Him and others. E.g in Leviticus, it is said that when we gather grapes for the vineyard, we should leave some for the sojourner. To do so ungrudgingly, one must first realise that God is the one who blesses his vineyard, and one must first not be anxious about his harvest, e.g one must first trust God. And when one trusts God, he can love his neighbor easily because there is no longer any anxiety etc preventing him from loving his neighbour by leaving grapes.
- The scribe understood that it is not about outward religiosity, but it is about the attitude of the heart. See Isaiah 1:10-20, our scripture reading for today. Or see many other of the OT prophets haha... Christian living is more than just mechanically memorising scripture and turning up on Sunday because it is an obligation, true Christian living includes loving our neighbour too (which would demonstrate our love for God).
- However, when we try to love God with all our heart, soul, mind and strength, and to love our neighbour as ourselves, we'll soon realise that we can't do it with our own strength. We need a savior. And this savior is Jesus. Even in the OT, we know that even as the sincere, faithful OT people tried their best to love God, they still needed to trust in God for the forgiveness of their sins, because they realise that they fall short (e.g all the Psalms, like Psalm 51). Now that God has revealed Himself to us through the person of His Son, we put our trust in Jesus, who is the image of the invisible God and the exact imprint of God's glory. Just as the OT saints trusted in God to forgive their failures to love God perfectly, today we trust in Jesus to forgive us our failures to love God perfectly. And we also know that as we put our trust in Jesus, He will slowly transform us to help us to better love Him and our neighbours.
- Loving our neighbours means more than doing good deeds (it is not less than that), loving our neighbours also means inviting them to follow Jesus, and helping them to be disciples of Jesus, because Jesus is the source of life.

20th March 2022: False Piety or True Devotion

Text:

[38] And in his teaching he said, “Beware of the scribes, who like to walk around in long robes and like greetings in the marketplaces [39] and have the best seats in the synagogues and the places of honor at feasts, [40] who devour widows’ houses and for a pretense make long prayers. They will receive the greater condemnation.”

[41] And he sat down opposite the treasury and watched the people putting money into the offering box. Many rich people put in large sums. [42] And a poor widow came and put in two small copper coins, which make a penny. [43] And he called his disciples to him and said to them, “Truly, I say to you, this poor widow has put in more than all those who are contributing to the offering box. [44] For they all contributed out of their abundance, but she out of her poverty has put in everything she had, all she had to live on.”

Notes

- The two stories in today’s passage are deliberately arranged as so to contrast the scribes with the widow. The scribes neither loved God nor people, but the widow loved God with total devotion.
- The scribes appeared to be lovers of God, but they really are lovers of self (v38-39). They like to be viewed as pious by people, such as making long prayers in public, as compared to what Jesus said in the Sermon on the mount about private prayer. But we know that their piety is false, because their actions are unjust; they are said to “devour” widows’ houses. The scribes were hypocrites, exploiting the poor while still looking pious. This is a clear violation of the teaching of the Law and the Prophets, e.g in Isaiah 10:1-4. They did not love their neighbours, especially those who were vulnerable. And this is especially egregious because the scribes were supposed to know the Law. The widow in the story could have been one who’s house was devoured by the scribes.
- In the 20th century, Hitler was a master of outward religiosity with no inward piety. Reflections for us:
  - For leaders in the church, do y’all use your authority and power to exploit your sheep for the people under you?
  - For all: are we lovers of self when we should be lovers of God? Do you do things just to get the approval of others, to be seen as a ‘good Christian’? Are we pious only for people to see? We might be able to fool the people around us, but we can’t fool God. Do we live a double life? Are we well-behaved in church but for the rest of the week we’re mean to our spouse/children? The solution is to repent from this hypocrisy, to turn away from sin and to turn to God.
- The widow offered a small offering, but Jesus did not despise it. The widow offered two copper coins, where a copper coin was a hundredth of a denarius, where a denarius is a day’s wage for a labourer. In fact, Jesus commended the widow for giving more than the rich. In a sense, what Jesus looked at was not the absolute amount of money  $x$  given by a person, but the percentage of money given  $x/x_{\text{Total}}$ . There was not as much sacrifice on the part of the rich, when they gave, but for the widow, her offering was costly for her.
- The widow serves thus as a vivid model for sacrificial discipleship, complete surrender, and total trust. Without the trust that God will care for her, she probably wouldn't have given all her money.

- “The story of the poor widow reminds us that in God's economy, the size of the gift is of no consequence, what is of consequence is the size of the giver's heart”. Even if our gift is small, God can multiply it anyway (c.f the story of the 5 loaf and 2 fishes). Reflections for us:
  - Is God speaking to you and nudging you to give more sacrificially?
  - Besides giving, in what other ways can we practice sacrificial discipleship that Jesus requires of us?
  - Is our discipleship merely based on convenience?

One example: do we plan our day/life such that we give God the remainder of our money/time only after we have spent the money/time on ourselves? Or do we give to God the firstfruits of our time/money/energy?

- Application to worship: online service is definitely more convenient than coming to church, but it is a poor substitute. Do we then do things based on our convenience, or do we sacrifice a bit of our convenience so that we can obey God's revealed will for us to come together to meet to exhort each other.
- Let us ... (conclusion to be added later)

27th March 2022: Extravagant devotion

Text: Mark 14:1-11

[1] It was now two days before the Passover and the Feast of Unleavened Bread. And the chief priests and the scribes were seeking how to arrest him by stealth and kill him, [2] for they said, “Not during the feast, lest there be an uproar from the people.”

[3] And while he was at Bethany in the house of Simon the leper, as he was reclining at table, a woman came with an alabaster flask of ointment of pure nard, very costly, and she broke the flask and poured it over his head. [4] There were some who said to themselves indignantly, “Why was the ointment wasted like that? [5] For this ointment could have been sold for more than three hundred denarii and given to the poor.” And they scolded her. [6] But Jesus said, “Leave her alone. Why do you trouble her? She has done a beautiful thing to me. [7] For you always have the poor with you, and whenever you want, you can do good for them. But you will not always have me. [8] She has done what she could; she has anointed my body beforehand for burial. [9] And truly, I say to you, wherever the gospel is proclaimed in the whole world, what she has done will be told in memory of her.”

[10] Then Judas Iscariot, who was one of the twelve, went to the chief priests in order to betray him to them. [11] And when they heard it, they were glad and promised to give him money. And he sought an opportunity to betray him.

Notes

- This event here took place close to Passover (as mentioned in v1). As seen in v2, someone wanted Jesus dead.
- Today's main point: Faithful disciples can show their extravagant commitment (devotion) in the face of criticism because God will commend such efforts. I.e, three 'C's.
- Commitment: in verse 3, we see an unnamed woman. In these times, due to ancient Jewish customs, the fellowship here was probably a men's fellowship. Women only attend such fellowship to serve food etc. Hence what the woman did here was going against the social norms. And since women probably won't be able to afford such expensive ointment, this ointment was probably all she had. Thus the lesson here is that faithful disciples show their commitment to Jesus despite the challenges faced. Just like how the woman went against social norms to anoint Jesus, and gave all she had for Jesus, are we ready to go against social norms and give all we have for Jesus?
- Criticism: in verse 4, we see some men criticising the woman's gift as wasted. During Passover, the Jews were obligated to give alms to the poor, and this was why they were thinking of the poor. But what the men implicitly said was that Jesus was not worthy of this expensive gift. Taken the actions of the men negatively, possibly these men could be trying to virtue signal, to let other people know how much they know about the poor. Taking the actions of the men as positively as possible, in a sense, they put the commandment to 'love your neighbour' above the commandment to 'love God'. In our context, we note that no matter what we do for God, we will always receive criticism of some kind. For example, if we give up our high paying job for full-time ministry, people might criticise us saying that our tithes could have done more for God. If we stay in our high paying jobs instead of going into full-time, people might criticise us for being lovers of money. We will always face criticism of some kind as long as we are faithful disciples of Jesus.

- Commendation: in verses 6-9, Jesus commends the woman's action as beautiful. Jesus also re-orientes the priority of the men there; His death was so imminent, whereas the poor would always exist. Though as Christians we must try to alleviate poverty wherever we can, sometimes we must weigh the needs of the hour. The woman here gave what she could, and she prepared his body for burial. And hence, she will be remembered for her commitment, just as what we are doing now by remembering her actions. Thus, for us today, we must realise that though we may face criticism for our faithful service, Jesus will commend our faithful service at the end.
- Some reflections: here the disciples were considered the inner circle, but they didn't do what the woman did. The disciples knew Jesus better than the woman, but yet the woman was the one who got it. And when we compare the woman to the scribes and the Pharisees, in this sense, the woman was already in the kingdom of God. For us, this shows that just because someone goes to church regularly, goes to seminary regularly etc, doesn't mean that he/she is committed to Christ. Commitment is shown by what we do for Jesus, like the woman, not outward religiosity like the Pharisees.
- More reflections: furthermore, God is sovereign; He can make us of our faithful service for His kingdom, though we cannot see right now how our faithful service can be used. It is just like the woman, she didn't know the effect of her breaking the alabaster jar for God, but God was always in control.
- In a sense also, Jesus is heaven's alabaster jar, broken for us for our healing. He is the Son of God, infinitely precious, yet He took on human nature and died on the cross for our sins. For us then, are we also prepared to be broken for Jesus? I.e, are we ready to give our life to God just like how Jesus gave His life for us?

3rd April 2022: Through the fire and the flames

Text: Mark 14:27-50

[27] And Jesus said to them, "You will all fall away, for it is written, 'I will strike the shepherd, and the sheep will be scattered.' [28] But after I am raised up, I will go before you to Galilee." [29] Peter said to him, "Even though they all fall away, I will not." [30] And Jesus said to him, "Truly, I tell you, this very night, before the rooster crows twice, you will deny me three times." [31] But he said emphatically, "If I must die with you, I will not deny you." And they all said the same.

[32] And they went to a place called Gethsemane. And he said to his disciples, "Sit here while I pray." [33] And he took with him Peter and James and John, and began to be greatly distressed and troubled. [34] And he said to them, "My soul is very sorrowful, even to death. Remain here and watch." [35] And going a little farther, he fell on the ground and prayed that, if it were possible, the hour might pass from him. [36] And he said, "Abba, Father, all things are possible for you. Remove this cup from me. Yet not what I will, but what you will." [37] And he came and found them sleeping, and he said to Peter, "Simon, are you asleep? Could you not watch one hour? [38] Watch and pray that you may not enter into temptation. The spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak." [39] And again he went away and prayed, saying the same words. [40] And again he came and found them sleeping, for their eyes were very heavy, and they did not know what to answer him. [41] And he came the third time and said to them, "Are you still sleeping and taking your rest? It is enough; the hour has come. The Son of Man is betrayed into the hands of sinners. [42] Rise, let us be going; see, my betrayer is at hand."

[43] And immediately, while he was still speaking, Judas came, one of the twelve, and with him a crowd with swords and clubs, from the chief priests and the scribes and the elders. [44] Now the betrayer had given them a sign, saying, "The one I will kiss is the man. Seize him and lead him away under guard." [45] And when he came, he went up to him at once and said, "Rabbi!" And he kissed him. [46] And they laid hands on him and seized him. [47] But one of those who stood by drew his sword and struck the servant of the high priest and cut off his ear. [48] And Jesus said to them, "Have you come out as against a robber, with swords and clubs to capture me? [49] Day after day I was with you in the temple teaching, and you did not seize me. But let the Scriptures be fulfilled." [50] And they all left him and fled.

Notes

- Discipleship is not always easy. Small example: saturday night is a prime time for fun and entertainment, which makes waking up in Sunday morning difficult. We can't follow Jesus and be His disciples if we follow what our flesh desires. What our flesh desires is usually contrary to following the Lord.
- True Christian discipleship is a renunciation of our self and a conformity to God. This is expressed in Jesus' prayer in Gethsemane: "Yet not what I will, but what you will". As Jesus thought about His upcoming betrayal and death, He was distressed. This was not because Jesus was suddenly taken aback by this. He has known from the start that this was His Father's will (e.g Mark 9). The agony in Jesus' soul wasn't a result of an inner wavering, it was a very human reaction to the horrors that was to come. Our Lord is completely human, and completely God (c.f Dyophysitism and Dyothelitism).

- Jesus could have just escaped under the cover of darkness, but He didn't. In the face of this great agony and temptation, He prayed. He knew that His Father could do all things, yet He prayed: "Yet not what I will, but what you will". Since the Christian life is a life of following the pattern of Jesus, we too must deny ourselves and obey God's will.
- There are three ways in which we can renounce ourselves and conform to God. The first way is to renounce an overconfidence in ourselves. We must always humbly depend on God to keep us from falling away. Jesus here quotes a prophecy from Zechariah 13 that prophesies the temporary falling away of Jesus' disciples. But when Peter heard that, he over-confidently said that he won't deny Jesus. Yet all of the disciples fled Jesus' side at verse 50. As fallen humans, we are all susceptible to temptation. Though we know what we ought to do and what we ought not to do, we might still fall into temptation. "The Spirit is willing, but the flesh is weak". If we are overconfident in our ability to follow God, we will fall. The paradox is this: we must realise we are weak, which would push us to depend on God, which would then keep us from temptation. As Jesus said: "watch and pray, that you may not enter into temptation". When we watch, we are watchful for the external circumstances that we know we are weak to. And when we pray, we are depending on divine assistance against temptation (c.f Psalm 121). Discipleship means a humble dependance on God's grace, so we may be conformed to God. The disciples slept and hence they fell; on the other hand, Jesus watched and prayed and depended fully on God, hence Jesus overcame temptation.
- Discipleship also means renouncing false expectations and accept the cross. When it comes to following our Lord, expectations are important, because false expectations hinder us from discipleship. One reason the disciples deserted Jesus was because they had a certain expectation of what Jesus would do. When the mob first came, they didn't flee yet; they were prepared to defend Jesus, with one of them even drawing his sword. They only fled after Jesus said: "let the Scriptures be fulfilled". The disciples did not see that coming. They were expecting Jesus to establish an earthly political kingdom as the messiah. They were expecting Jesus to start a revolution to overthrow the Romans and the Herodian dynasty. This is why when we read the earlier chapters, we see James and John the son of Zebedee asking to be on Jesus right hand when the kingdom comes. When Jesus gave Himself over, the disciples all fled because their false expectations crumbled. For us, when we also have false expectations about Jesus, and usually these false expectations appeal to our flesh such as the prosperity gospel, these false expectations give people a mistaken idea of Christianity. And hence when these false expectations crumble, people will also lose their "faith". The real thing about Christianity is to follow Jesus to be crucified; i.e while Jesus was literally crucified, we must crucify the desires of our flesh which may or may not include martyrdom. We must follow our Lord through the fire and flames of temptation. Our sinful self must die, and our sinful flesh must be crucified. And our sinful self must be replaced by an obedience of faith. Yet paradoxically, it is only through this struggle that we have freedom and peace. E.g, the struggle to quit smoking is tough, yet the final freedom from addiction is truly liberating. Similarly, we must struggle with sin and temptation through God's Spirit, and only when we do so, then we are truly free.
- Discipleship also means renouncing the world. The disciples were ready to defend Jesus to establish a worldly kingdom, yet they all fled when Jesus gave himself up to establish a spiritual kingdom. The way of the world is to fight, trample, manipulate and dominate for the sake of gain and power. This is not anything new; this has been around since the days of Cain and Abel. On the other hand, we have Jesus, who was ready to give Himself up for the world. When we were still sinners, Christ died for us. The way of God, as demonstrated by Christ is love and self-sacrifice. This is clearly in contradistinction to the way of the world. If Jesus' kingdom were of the world, we would all be taking up arms and manipulating people etc for Jesus' kingdom. Yet since Jesus' kingdom is not of the world, the way to bring about Jesus' kingdom is through love, just like what Jesus did for the world. A real life example would be the AWARE (an NGO) saga, where a group of Christian women took over the NGO's leadership through subterfuge, because they were concerned about AWARE's pro-LGBTQ stance. The concerns of the Christians involved were valid, but to resort to the ways of the world is to damage our Christian witness. Jesus' kingdom is not of the world, and if we rely on worldly means such as taking up the sword, we damage the message of the Kingdom of God, which is a message of self-sacrificial love.

- Discipleship isn't easy, but our Lord is with us. Following Him means we must renounce ourselves and conform to God, which isn't easy. Since we aren't perfectly obedient, we might find ourselves falling away from time to time. But because our Lord is with us, He will pick us up when we fall. In verse 28, after predicting the disciples' abandonment, Jesus said that He will be raised up and go ahead of them to meet Him in Galilee. Mark's gospel doesn't really tell us what happens in Galilee, but from the other gospels, we see that Jesus commissioned the disciples in Galilee. Right from the start, Jesus was ready to forgive the disciples for their failing. As is written in 1 John 1:9, if we confess our sins, God is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.

10 April 2022: Blessed is He who comes in the name of the Lord

Text: Mark 11:1-11

[1] Now when they drew near to Jerusalem, to Bethphage and Bethany, at the Mount of Olives, Jesus sent two of his disciples [2] and said to them, "Go into the village in front of you, and immediately as you enter it you will find a colt tied, on which no one has ever sat. Untie it and bring it. [3] If anyone says to you, 'Why are you doing this?' say, 'The Lord has need of it and will send it back here immediately.'" [4] And they went away and found a colt tied at a door outside in the street, and they untied it. [5] And some of those standing there said to them, "What are you doing, untying the colt?" [6] And they told them what Jesus had said, and they let them go. [7] And they brought the colt to Jesus and threw their cloaks on it, and he sat on it. [8] And many spread their cloaks on the road, and others spread leafy branches that they had cut from the fields. [9] And those who went before and those who followed were shouting, "Hosanna! Blessed is he who comes in the name of the Lord! [10] Blessed is the coming kingdom of our father David! Hosanna in the highest!"

[11] And he entered Jerusalem and went into the temple. And when he had looked around at everything, as it was already late, he went out to Bethany with the twelve.

Notes

- What Jesus did here was quite different from His previous actions; previously He wanted to keep his actions secret, yet in this text He was very public. In the past, Jesus didn't want people to think He was a revolutionary who would start a coup, hence His secrecy. But from this portion onwards, Jesus openly confronts the religious leaders in Jerusalem for their hypocrisy. So why would Jesus publicly enter Jerusalem on a donkey? Three points:
  - It is symbolic
  - It is simple(?)
  - It is for suspense
- Symbolic: Jesus gives very clear and specific instructions to two of His disciples, such as where to find the colt, what to say if they were questioned, etc. In the response 'the Lord has need of it', it can either mean that the master of the colt needs it, or God needs it. In verse 2, we also see that the colt must not have been sat on before. This is consonant with the OT laws that animals that are used for sacred purposes must not have been used before for other stuff. Here we see that everything Jesus does here is intentional. All his actions are symbols and signs that fulfill Old Testament prophecies (e.g Zechariah 9:9). It shows to the people that God remembers and keep His promises about a coming messiah king that would come to save His people. In Zechariah 9:9, we see that the coming king will be humble, and this is what exactly Jesus is. Though Jesus is the King of Kings and the Lord of Lords, he entered the city on a donkey and on a makeshift saddle. And looking forward, Jesus will not fully display His glory until He goes humbly to the cross. Also, the people's response is from Psalm 118:25-28. Hosanna used to mean 'save us' but by that time is also used as a term of worship. The people's response showed that they understood that Jesus was King and savior, though they also misunderstood what Jesus would do as King.
- Simple: Though His disciples still didn't fully understand what Jesus was about to do, they still had faith in Jesus and trusted in Him. They did whatever Jesus told them to do, following His instructions to a T. They did not know what the actions would lead to, but their simple faith and obedience fulfilled God's purposes. They recognised that Jesus is the messiah king. Though the disciples are like us, frail and weak, Jesus still used them for His purposes. And from the disciples' POV, through their simple faith, they helped to bring about God's plan.

- Suspense: Will Jesus find His house in order? From v11, we see that the first thing that Jesus did was to enter the temple. And then subsequently, Jesus pronounced judgment on the temple, which similar to OT, was an indictment against the religious leaders.

17th April 2022: He has risen!

Text: Mark 16:1-8

[1] When the Sabbath was past, Mary Magdalene, Mary the mother of James, and Salome bought spices, so that they might go and anoint him. [2] And very early on the first day of the week, when the sun had risen, they went to the tomb. [3] And they were saying to one another, "Who will roll away the stone for us from the entrance of the tomb?" [4] And looking up, they saw that the stone had been rolled back—it was very large. [5] And entering the tomb, they saw a young man sitting on the right side, dressed in a white robe, and they were alarmed. [6] And he said to them, "Do not be alarmed. You seek Jesus of Nazareth, who was crucified. He has risen; he is not here. See the place where they laid him. [7] But go, tell his disciples and Peter that he is going before you to Galilee. There you will see him, just as he told you." [8] And they went out and fled from the tomb, for trembling and astonishment had seized them, and they said nothing to anyone, for they were afraid.

Notes

- Three points: Certainty of Jesus' death, Certainty of Jesus' resurrection, and commissioning of Jesus' disciples.
- Certainty of Jesus' death: There were three women who knew where Jesus were buried. They brought spices to the tomb because they were hoping to annoint Jesus' body. The purpose of this was to mask the odor of decaying flesh with spices and oil. They waited until after the Sabbath was over to do this. But as they came, they realised that since Jesus' tomb was sealed with a giant stone, someone needed to roll it away for them. Jesus' death was no accident; it was Jesus intentionally giving away His life to save everyone. The timing and manner in which Jesus died was in accordance with God's sovereign plan, as it has been attested to centuries prior in the Prophets.
- From 1 John 4:9-10, we see that Jesus died because of Man's sins, but also because of God's love. Death is not natural, death is a result of sin. God is the source of life, and if we turn away from life, the only consequence is death. Jesus didn't come just to be a moral example, He came to die, and He came because He loves. One of the characteristic of love is to seek the well-being of others, sometimes self-sacrificially. God gave His only Son to take on human flesh and to die on the cross for our sins. Only Jesus could be the perfect substitute as an atoning sacrifice, because of the worthiness of Jesus' person, since Jesus is God's Son.
- Sin is always costly, instead of downplaying our sins etc, let us turn to God in repentance and ask God for forgiveness, so that instead of sin, our heart will be gripped by love, a love that will help us walk in God's ways.
- Certainty of Jesus' resurrection: When the women reached the tomb, they saw that the rock was removed. This would have been surprising and alarming for them, because if the stone is removed, what about the body inside? Instead of a body, the women saw a white (angelic) figure who told them that Jesus is risen, and that they will see Jesus in Galilee. Thereafter, the women told the disciples of Jesus, and then the disciples also saw the risen Christ, and then the disciples proclaimed the message of Jesus' death and resurrection to the whole world. Now, if this claim was a hoax, it would be very easy for the enemies of Jesus to just produce a body. It is also highly unlikely for the disciples to die for a lie. Lastly, society in those days was very dismissive of the testimony of women; for the writer of Mark's gospel to say that it was the women who first saw the risen Christ, this is a mark of authenticity. If this account was made up, Mark would have chosen to use men instead to give himself more credibility.

- Now, if Jesus had not been risen, at most His death could be considered heroic. But His death would still be in vain. Paul puts it nicely in 1 Corinthians 15:17-22. But Jesus is really risen. And Jesus' resurrection assures us that God has forgiven us of our sins. Jesus' resurrection also assures us that God will free us from sin's curse. Just like Jesus, one day all of us will be given a new body free of pains and suffering and death. Jesus' resurrection shows that God has the power to destroy suffering and death. Apart from God's power in Jesus' resurrection, there is nothing else that can end the suffering and death in this world.
- When Jesus rose from the dead, He ushered in a new Kingdom that is slowly growing, and as the Kingdom grows, the world will be slowly transformed. As Christians we can all testify to the freedom from the bondage of sin. Though there is still conflict and suffering in the world, we know the final end of the world; Jesus will keep His promise and come again. The future renewal of the world does not depend on things like how much power/influence us Christians have, but it depends on Jesus' promise; and only an alive person can keep promises.
- Commissioning of Jesus' disciples: After the women met the angelic figure, they ran out, for trembling and astonishment has gripped them. Their world has been turned upside down; they came to anoint Jesus' dead body, but then now they learn that Jesus is alive. The fact that God chose the women to tell the men of Jesus resurrection shows that God uses both men and women in His mission. Despite our failings as men and women, God chooses to use both men and women for Gospel proclamation. The inclusion of women in a male-dominated society was really revolutionary. Now, Mark chapter 16 ends at verse 20, though there are a few early manuscripts that do not have verses 9-20. Yet the account in those verses are credible, for they are testified to in other gospels.
- Now, suppose that Mark really ended at verse 8. What could be Mark's point? The point could be that Mark is trying to say that despite the failing of the men (the disciples deserted Jesus) and the failing of the women (they were too afraid and didn't tell anyone), God still uses these men and women for His own purposes, and that those failures will eventually be redeemed as long as the people continue to trust in God. And in history, we do know that those failures are redeemed, for in the other gospels, it is testified that the women did tell the disciples. For us today, the possible takeaway for us is that despite our fears, God enables both men and women to be faithful in Gospel proclamation. We can be faithful despite our fears because Christ has risen, and that all the forces of evil have been decisively defeated.
- If Jesus really died and rose again, then nothing can stop Him from showing forth His glory through us Christians. Just as Jesus has risen, we too will share in that power, which enables us to be faithful, and gives us the hope that at the end, all will be made right.

24th April 2022: Is it all meaningless?

Text: Ecclesiastes 1:1-11

[1] The words of the Preacher, the son of David, king in Jerusalem.

[2] Vanity of vanities, says the Preacher, vanity of vanities! All is vanity. [3] What does man gain by all the toil at which he toils under the sun? [4] A generation goes, and a generation comes, but the earth remains forever. [5] The sun rises, and the sun goes down, and hastens to the place where it rises. [6] The wind blows to the south and goes around to the north; around and around goes the wind, and on its circuits the wind returns. [7] All streams run to the sea, but the sea is not full; to the place where the streams flow, there they flow again. [8] All things are full of weariness; a man cannot utter it; the eye is not satisfied with seeing, nor the ear filled with hearing. [9] What has been is what will be, and what has been done is what will be done, and there is nothing new under the sun. [10] Is there a thing of which it is said, "See, this is new"? It has been already in the ages before us. [11] There is no remembrance of former things, nor will there be any remembrance of later things yet to be among those who come after.

Notes

- Life sometimes feels like a chore. E.g endless household chores to do; we vacuum and mop the floor, yet tomorrow it becomes dirty again. There seems to be a tiresome cycle to life, we just do the same toilsome things over and over again. After a while, we ask: what is life all about? Are things all meaningless?
- Ecclesiastes belongs to the genre of wisdom literature, together with Proverbs, Job, and Song of Songs. Wisdom literature wrestles with the question of how to live wisely amid the many challenges of life. Ecclesiastes opens with a prologue by the 'Narrator' (1:1 to 1:11), and then the 'Preacher' speaks (1:12 to 12:7), and then there is an epilogue by the 'Narrator' again (12:8 to 12:14). Hence, as for the structure of the book, we can think of it as the words of the 'Preacher' sandwiched in between the prologue and the epilogue. The English name of the book, Ecclesiastes, is a transliteration of the Greek (eklesiastes), but in the Hebrew the name is 'Qoheleth', which literally means "the one who assembles".
- Who is the 'Preacher'? The 'Preacher' seems to be speaking from the point of view of Solomon, though some modern bible scholars now think that Ecclesiastes is a fictional autobiography written at a later time by someone writing in the Solomonic tradition. Most likely, Ecclesiastes was written during the post-exilic period, when Israel was still under foreign rule and when there was much social injustice. While there are many indications that the 'Preacher' could be Solomon, there are also many indications that the 'Preacher' is not; for example, Ecclesiastes 1:16a would not make sense if the 'Preacher' is Solomon, since the only king before Solomon was David.
- OT books like Proverbs and the OT Law describe the action-consequence formula in detail. The idea is: do good things and follow God, and then you'll be blessed. Do bad things and disobey God, and then you'll be cursed. But in the post-exilic period, the action-consequence principle doesn't seem to hold anymore. The wicked prosper, and the righteous suffer. Hence, the Preacher was writing from the POV of someone who was frustrated with how the action-consequence principle doesn't seem to apply in his day.
- Four main points for today, all starting with M. The first M is 'meaningless'. 'Hebel/Hevel' in Hebrew literally means breath or vapour, and in English, that idiom is translated as 'vanity' or ‘meaninglessness’. There are things in life that make life seem utterly meaningless. How did the Preacher come to this conclusion? Firstly, it seems that there was nothing to be gained from all the toil under the sun. Like vapor, the things we do in our life has no permanent impact, it makes no lasting impression.

- The next M is monotony. To support his argument, the Preacher uses arguments from the natural world (v4-7), and from human experiences (v8-10). From the arguments from the natural world, we see that one generation comes and another generation goes, but the cycles that happen in nature just keep repeating itself monotonously, there doesn't seem to be any real progress in the things in nature. From the arguments from human experiences, we see that nothing really satisfies us. Everyday we see an endless procession of internet images, from Netflix, Disney+, etc etc, but after all our looking and listening, our eyes are not satisfied. We still want to see some more and to hear some more. There is always one more game to watch, one more show to watch, one more song to listen to. The circularity of nature above is paralleled by the repetitiveness of history; there is nothing new under the sun. What has been is what will be, what has been done is what will be done. E.g, war has been a big part of human history, and it will continue to be a big part of human history. While the weapons of war are different, the effects are the same; people die, homes are destroyed. While some might say that the cycles in Nature are beautiful and even essential, we must empathise with the Preacher as he reflects on how small he is and how everything he does seems to be inconsequential.
- The next M is mortality (v11). If the above two points are not depressing enough, the climax of the Preacher's argument is this; one day we all have to die, and no one remembers us. We may be crowned the Olympic champion today, but four years later we don't make the cut, and people don't remember us. What more after we die?
- There are two ways of understanding Ecclesiastes:
  - Approach 1: If God is not in our life, life will be meaningless; only when we bring God into the picture will life be meaningful. Thus, the goal of the Preacher is to drown us in pessimism, so that we will gasp for air and realise our need for God.
  - Approach 2: Even when God is in our lives, life can still feel meaningless. The Preacher then wants to teach us the following lesson: How do we then resolve the tension between what our faith teaches us (that life ought to be meaningful), and what we observe and experience in our lives that seems to point in the opposite direction?

The approach for this sermon series on Ecclesiastes will be to take the second approach, as the Pastoral team thinks that the second message is more faithful to the text. The message that is repeated through Ecclesiastes (6 times) is the verse in Ecclesiastes 2:24. Even when life seems to be meaningless, when life doesn't make sense, when God seems to be absent, we should still fear God. We should still be joyful and do good. We can still eat and drink and be thankful for God's provision even in our toil. As Christians, we can identify with what the Preacher is saying. In Romans 8:20, we see that the creation was subjected to futility. This is a result of sin. But Christ, in His incarnation, entered into our creation which is subjected to futility and took on the full brunt of that futility which is a result of us being separated from God through sin. Hence, through Christ's resurrection, we can experience the full meaning of life as we are reconciled with God. But insofar as we are still in the flesh, we are 'groaning' with the entire creation (also Romans 8) as we await the redemption of our bodies which will only happen with Christ comes again.

- In the end, we have to struggle with that tension between what our faith teaches us (that life is meaningful), and what we experience sometimes (that life is meaningless). One way to think about it is that when life seems meaningless, we should not conclude that there is no meaning to life, but we should conclude that the meaning is currently incomprehensible to us. And while we struggle with the incomprehensibility of certain things that happen in life - the apparent meaninglessness, monotony and our mortality - we must still acknowledge that God is very much present and that we can trust that in all things God works for the good of those who love him, and he will make everything beautiful in its time. And as we trust God, we obey Him and fear Him and keep His commandments in faith, for that is our duty. We have the hope that God will bring every deed into judgment, with every secret thing, whether good or evil. That is the message of Ecclesiastes, and that is the last M for today.

1st May 2022: Where can we find fulfilment?

Text: Ecclesiastes 1:12-2:26

[12] I the Preacher have been king over Israel in Jerusalem. [13] And I applied my heart to seek and to search out by wisdom all that is done under heaven. It is an unhappy business that God has given to the children of man to be busy with. [14] I have seen everything that is done under the sun, and behold, all is vanity and a striving after wind.

[15] What is crooked cannot be made straight, and what is lacking cannot be counted.

[16] I said in my heart, "I have acquired great wisdom, surpassing all who were over Jerusalem before me, and my heart has had great experience of wisdom and knowledge."

[17] And I applied my heart to know wisdom and to know madness and folly. I perceived that this also is but a striving after wind.

[18] For in much wisdom is much vexation, and he who increases knowledge increases sorrow.

[1] I said in my heart, "Come now, I will test you with pleasure; enjoy yourself." But behold, this also was vanity. [2] I said of laughter, "It is mad," and of pleasure, "What use is it?" [3] I searched with my heart how to cheer my body with wine—my heart still guiding me with wisdom—and how to lay hold on folly, till I might see what was good for the children of man to do under heaven during the few days of their life. [4] I made great works. I built houses and planted vineyards for myself. [5] I made myself gardens and parks, and planted in them all kinds of fruit trees. [6] I made myself pools from which to water the forest of growing trees. [7] I bought male and female slaves, and had slaves who were born in my house. I had also great possessions of herds and flocks, more than any who had been before me in Jerusalem. [8] I also gathered for myself silver and gold and the treasure of kings and provinces. I got singers, both men and women, and many concubines, the delight of the sons of man.

[9] So I became great and surpassed all who were before me in Jerusalem. Also my wisdom remained with me. [10] And whatever my eyes desired I did not keep from them. I kept my heart from no pleasure, for my heart found pleasure in all my toil, and this was my reward for all my toil. [11] Then I considered all that my hands had done and the toil I had expended in doing it, and behold, all was vanity and a striving after wind, and there was nothing to be gained under the sun.

[12] So I turned to consider wisdom and madness and folly. For what can the man do who comes after the king? Only what has already been done. [13] Then I saw that there is more gain in wisdom than in folly, as there is more gain in light than in darkness. [14] The wise person has his eyes in his head, but the fool walks in darkness. And yet I perceived that the same event happens to all of them. [15] Then I said in my heart, "What happens to the fool will happen to me also. Why then have I been so very wise?" And I said in my heart that this also is vanity. [16] For of the wise as of the fool there is no enduring remembrance, seeing that in the days to come all will have been long forgotten. How the wise dies just like the fool! [17] So I hated life, because what is done under the sun was grievous to me, for all is vanity and a striving after wind.

[18] I hated all my toil in which I toil under the sun, seeing that I must leave it to the man who will come after me, [19] and who knows whether he will be wise or a fool? Yet he will be master of all for which I toiled and used my wisdom under the sun. This also is vanity. [20] So I turned about and gave my heart up to despair over all the toil of my labors under the sun, [21] because sometimes a person who has toiled with wisdom and knowledge and skill must leave everything to be enjoyed by someone who did not toil for it. This also is vanity and a great evil. [22] What has a man from all the toil and striving of heart with which he toils beneath the sun? [23] For all his days are full of sorrow, and his work is a vexation. Even in the night his heart does not rest. This also is vanity.

[24] There is nothing better for a person than that he should eat and drink and find enjoyment in his toil. This also, I saw, is from the hand of God, [25] for apart from him who can eat or who can have enjoyment? [26] For to the one who pleases him God has given wisdom and knowledge and joy, but to the sinner he has given the business of gathering and collecting, only to give to one who pleases God. This also is vanity and a striving after wind.

Notes

- Recap: Today's passage seems to point to Solomon as the 'preacher'. Until the 16th century, both Jewish and Christian interpreters thought that Solomon was the author of Ecclesiastes. The rejection of Solomonic authorship is due to linguistic factors etc. Those who reject Solomonic authorship put Ecclesiastes in the time of the return from exile. In Ecclesiastes, there are two voices, that of the narrator and that of the Preacher. The narrator speaks in the prologue and the epilogue, and then in the middle we have the voice of the Preacher. Here, the Preacher is speaking from the POV of Solomon. The goal of the book of Ecclesiastes is: what is the meaning of life?
- Today's sermon point: what will it take for us to find fulfilment? What if we were the richest in Singapore, would that make us happy? Etc. If even Solomon, the person with the most resources in the history of the world, couldn't find fulfilment through worldly means, what would that mean for us?
- In Eccl 1:12-18, we see the Preacher, in the voice of Solomon, telling us about the research he has done to try to find fulfilment. In the Preacher's academic quest to find out what gives fulfilment, he left no stone unturned; he even checked if folly can give fulfilment. In the end, he concluded that 'it is an unhappy business that God has given to the children of men to be busy with', where 'unhappy business' refers back to the curse of sin that God placed on creation (Gen 3:14-19). In Eccl 1:16-18, we see that no matter how wise we are, because of sin in the world, there will always be things that we can't know and things we can't fix. 'What is crooked cannot be made straight, and what is lacking cannot be counted'. In the end, much knowledge increases sorrow, since with more knowledge comes the growing realisation that knowledge cannot fix everything in this world. Application: we can't find our meaning in life through academic means, through signing up for whatever enrichment courses, learning from all sorts of gurus, etc.
- In Eccl 2:1-17, we see Solomon (the Preacher's persona) continuing his quest to try to find fulfilment testing if pleasure is the source of fulfilment. Here, the Preacher tries amusement, stimulation with wine, finishing many building projects for himself, possessions, collections, entertainment, sex, etc. His conclusion was that all of those means to try to find fulfilment were futility. If we aren't chasing God, we are merely chasing the wind. In fact there is some sort of irony; the harder we try to find fulfilment, the emptier we end up. If we are living in circles, we need to turn our lives over to Jesus, the wisdom and power of God.
- In Eccl 2:18-26, we see that no matter how hard we work to accumulate wealth and possessions, we cannot bring them with us to the grave. The lesson here is paralleled with the parable of the rich fool in Luke 12. Some people amass great fortune not for their benefit, but for their children, but more often than not such great fortunes are very easily squandered. Moreover, such great fortunes for the kids also destroy relationships. Ultimately, hard work is not an end to itself, possessions aren't an end to itself, but they are just things that point to God.

- In the end, in view of eternity, our life on earth is super short in comparison. I.e, if eternity is an infinite line, then our time here is a dot (a set of measure zero). Hence, we should live our lives with eternity in view. Things on this earth are just meant to point us to eternity. True happiness, true joy, is found only in God. If we treat the things in life as an ends in themselves, we will never find fulfilment. To dethrone God is to lose the key to life. We may pursue many human endeavors, but all we will find is vanity, the lack of ultimate fulfilment. But if we treat the things in life as things that point to God, we will find true fulfilment in God. If we enthrone God in our lives, we will enter into the fullness of life (John 17:3, Psalm 16:11).
- My reflections: in life, we have enough good to point us to God in thanksgiving, but also some brokenness due to sin that reminds us that these good things depend wholly on God and that these good things aren't an ends to themselves.

8th May 2022: Who really is in control?

Text: Ecclesiastes 3:1-4:3

[1] For everything there is a season, and a time for every matter under heaven:

[2] a time to be born, and a time to die; a time to plant, and a time to pluck up what is planted; [3] a time to kill, and a time to heal; a time to break down, and a time to build up; [4] a time to weep, and a time to laugh; a time to mourn, and a time to dance; [5] a time to cast away stones, and a time to gather stones together; a time to embrace, and a time to refrain from embracing; [6] a time to seek, and a time to lose; a time to keep, and a time to cast away; [7] a time to tear, and a time to sew; a time to keep silence, and a time to speak; [8] a time to love, and a time to hate; a time for war, and a time for peace.

[9] What gain has the worker from his toil? [10] I have seen the business that God has given to the children of man to be busy with. [11] He has made everything beautiful in its time. Also, he has put eternity into man's heart, yet so that he cannot find out what God has done from the beginning to the end. [12] I perceived that there is nothing better for them than to be joyful and to do good as long as they live; [13] also that everyone should eat and drink and take pleasure in all his toil—this is God's gift to man.

[14] I perceived that whatever God does endures forever; nothing can be added to it, nor anything taken from it. God has done it, so that people fear before him. [15] That which is, already has been; that which is to be, already has been; and God seeks what has been driven away.

[16] Moreover, I saw under the sun that in the place of justice, even there was wickedness, and in the place of righteousness, even there was wickedness. [17] I said in my heart, God will judge the righteous and the wicked, for there is a time for every matter and for every work. [18] I said in my heart with regard to the children of man that God is testing them that they may see that they themselves are but beasts. [19] For what happens to the children of man and what happens to the beasts is the same; as one dies, so dies the other. They all have the same breath, and man has no advantage over the beasts, for all is vanity. [20] All go to one place. All are from the dust, and to dust all return. [21] Who knows whether the spirit of man goes upward and the spirit of the beast goes down into the earth? [22] So I saw that there is nothing better than that a man should rejoice in his work, for that is his lot. Who can bring him to see what will be after him?

[1] Again I saw all the oppressions that are done under the sun. And behold, the tears of the oppressed, and they had no one to comfort them! On the side of their oppressors there was power, and there was no one to comfort them. [2] And I thought the dead who are already dead more fortunate than the living who are still alive. [3] But better than both is he who has not yet been and has not seen the evil deeds that are done under the sun.

Notes

- Three points that relate to the question: “Who really is in control?” Modern man likes to think that he is in control, but we need to be disabused of that notion. Three points that show us why we aren't really in control:
  - Time: we don't control time, time controls us.
  - Transience: we may think highly of ourselves, but we are temporary.

- Theology: God and the teaching of God's word. What is there in theology that we can use to fight the ravages of time and also our transience?
- Verse 1-8 is a nice poem, usually it is taken in a positive light to say: "bad things only last for a season, there will be good that come after the bad". While the poem is certainly beautiful, the author of Ecclesiastes means it here in a negative light; see verse 9 and verse 15. Especially verse 15, it seems to imply that God is the one that seeks to cycle through what has been done before. Verse 1-8 can also be taken negatively; when we want to dance, sometime happens beyond our control that causes us to mourn. When we want to laugh, something happens beyond our control that causes us to cry. The author seems to say that we are in some sort of God ordained cycle of good-and-bad that we have no control over. The cycles of life also might cause people to be sick of the tedium. In other religions, this cycle of life is also understood from a negative perspective. In Buddhism and Hinduism, we are stuck in the karmic cycle of life-death-rebirth, and the goal is to escape this cycle altogether.
- We can't control time, and that is made worse by the fact that our life is short, or transient. We might have thought that: "ok I can't control time, but if I can live for longer, I might have some limited control". God says 'nope'. "Dust we are, and dust we shall return". This is something that occurs to all, rich/poor, popular/unpopular, beautiful/ugly. And ironically, even though we are all transient, God has put eternity in our hearts, so that we all (whether we are religious or not) aspire to escape the transience. Richard Dawkins, well-known materialist/atheist, once told his granddaughter: "when I'm gone, look up at the stars, and remember grandpa". For even an atheist like Dawkins, even he wants to be remembered past his death; he can't handle the "truth" that he propounds that we are all cosmic accidents that don't matter. In spite of all our human attempts to overcome transience, we humans can't do that, yet we all naturally want to, since God has put eternity in our hearts. How frustrating is that! Eternity being put in our hearts also means that we have this yearning for the big picture, we want to find out how our life fits into this big picture. Sadly, we can't see the big picture as limited human beings, the author of Ecclesiastes says: "yet so that he cannot find out what God has done from the beginning to the end". How frustrating is that! We are not in control of how people remember us after we are gone, we are not in control of the impact that we have on the big picture, etc. Is God trolling us? We are all proud people, and perhaps this is a way for God to humble us.
- How do we now face the problems of time and transience that the author of Ecclesiastes has raised? Note that Ecclesiastes has not resolved the answer fully, but has only dropped hints. The final answer/resolution is found only in the gospel. What are some hints that the author of Ecclesiastes has dropped?
  - Time is cyclic, but from God's perspective, time actually has a "telos", a destination that he wants to direct the flow of time to. Time is tedious, but God has made everything beautiful in its time. The solution to the tedium of time is to put God in the equation; once we realise that God is at work mysteriously, and that God is with us, then every mundane/conventional moment can be a moment of beauty. E.g for a housewife who does nothing but housework daily, it might seem really tedious, but with God in her heart, because she knows God is working in every moment, she can enjoy every moment. E.g one person might want to celebrate, but God has stricken him with a disease outside of his control. What can he do? With God with him, he can still celebrate, but in a different way; once he knows that all this is part of God's plan for His purposes, he can work with God's plan joyfully to proclaim God's glory even in his sickness. These are some of the hints that the author of Ecclesiastes has dropped for us to answer the tyranny of time.

- The question to the transience of time has an answer. Richard Dawkins and all human beings generally want to be remembered. The answer to this is not in this particular text, but in the later parts of Ecclesiastes, we see that there is a final judgement and hence a final resurrection. We are not really transient; while people might forget us, God will not, and in fact the people who forget us will get to know us when we are all resurrected. There is an eternity for us after our death. The resurrection and the final judgement is also a hint to the problem of us not being able to see the big picture; one day we will be able to see the big picture, when we are resurrected.
- Now, if we aren't really transient, if we know that the big picture exists (though we can't see it), if we know that God ultimately directs time to a beautiful end (though we can't see it), we know that our work is not meaningless but is ultimately meaningful. Hence, we can go about our work joyfully today, even though we can't see the meaning today, because we know that there is an ultimate meaning that we are participating in. We can be joyful in all circumstances, in times of rejoicing and also in times of mourning, because we know that things are in the hands of God. Things are in the hands of God, who works all things for our good (Romans 8:28).
